Why EMS Training?

The EMS Training has triumphed

It is the fastest, safest and most effective way to achieve a beautiful and healthy body in record time.

In only 20 minutes per week we activate intensely and deeply up to 350 muscles at a time, being similar to several hours of conventional training.

EMS training is the talk of the town everywhere - not just business owners, but end users are also increasingly interested in this future-oriented training method.

The intuitively designed software allows for quick and safe operation. Pre-installed training programmes let you easily choose the right one for your customers.

Many experts consider the electro-myostimulation method (EMS) to be the future of training.

Boxing, Pilates or yoga.

Muscle building, endurance or fat reduction.

There are as many sports and types of training as there are people who train and do sports. AQ8 pulses are not perceived as being external to the body or foreign, but as a reinforcement the natural muscle tension, achieving unprecedented depth with maximum comfort.

Benefits of EMS Training

Build strength and endurance.

EMS improves how your muscles work together and increases the intensity of your muscle contractions, enabling your body to use up to 90% of its potential - achieving more, in a shorter time.

Build muscle.

The extra stimulation given to your muscles during an EMS training session is what leads to an increase in muscle mass. After just a few training sessions, you will typically notice an increase in the size of your chest, arm and leg muscles.

Rapid fat reduction.

For women, EMS training has been proven to reduce the size of common problem areas, such as around the waist, hips and thighs. At the same time, it will firm up the chest and arms.

For men, EMS training reduces waist size, whilst developing the arm, chest, back and leg muscles.

Reduce Muscle Tension

EMS training promotes the circulation of blood throughout the muscles, which can significantly help to release muscular tension and knots.

Improvement in sports performance

EMS training maximizes the capacity and strength of the muscles, as well as correcting the postural imbalances that can impede performance.

Improve posture and reduce back pain

An imbalance in the postural muscles in the back, tummy and pelvic floor can cause a variety of uncomfortable symptoms, including back pain.

Less strain on the musculoskeletal system:

EMS training poses no additional strain. The training intensity does not result from heavy loads, but from electrical stimulation. This is much easier on the joints and musculoskeletal system.

Rapid metabolic alteration.

EMS promotes a high level of metabolic activity during, and for many hours after, a training session. The higher your metabolism, the better your body will burn fat and build lean muscle mass.

The AQ8 System® Biosuit

We are especially proud of our exclusive EMS Biosuit!

Based on many years of experience, therefore this is the most durable EMS suit that has ever been built for professional use and the only with movable electrodes, which are placed freely on top of any muscle.
